University course catalog description: PR: Graduate standing or C.I. Ethics for practitioners of clinical medicine, health care delivery and medical research. Fall

Course Description: This course aims at critically introducing Medical Ethics as the philosophy discipline that investigates morality in its theoretical and practical aspects in relation to life and biomedical sciences.

The course is divided in 4 Modules as follows:

Module 1. Introduction to Medical Ethics. The Good Life - Value theory: In Value Theory we address the problem of finding out what a life worth living may be (a "good life") and how this problem relates overall to the study of ethics, and by extension, to its applications to medical ethics as related to what we value in health and health care.

Module 2. Medical Ethics & Normative Ethics I: In the study of Normative Ethics I we address the theories of right conduct towards others. For doing so, we discuss normative arguments in the debate between morality and religion, natural law, as well as psychological and ethical egoism, and its relations to medical ethics.

Module 3. Medical Ethics & Normative Ethics II: In the study of Normative Ethics II we address the theories of right conduct towards others in the context of consequence and duty in medical ethics.

Module 4. Medical Ethics, Normative Ethics III & Metaethics: In the study of Normative Ethics II we will address the theories of ethics in relation to the social contract and virtue theory extended to the medical domain. In the study of Metaethics we consider the status and nature of morality itself.

Course Objectives

Students shall:

1. Identify ethics arguments in the context of value theory, normative theory, and metaethics as applied to the medical domain;
2. Explore value theory by critically considering the varieties of “good life” approaches and its relations to ethics at large;
3. Explore the debate on the nature of morality in metaethics and its consequences;
4. Become familiar with normative theories of ethical conduct such as consequentialism, deontology, virtue-theory, feminist ethics, social contract theory and subsequently be able to consider the application of these theories to reflect upon contemporary moral problems.
5. Develop research topic in medical ethics informed by both theoretical and practical dimensions thereof.

Evaluation and Grading

Description of the assessments:

Self-paced quizzes: those are activities to help you master the content and be clear about your basic level of interpretation of the readings. You can re-take as much as you like the quizzes. Only the final, highest grade will be recorded.

Discussion posts: Every week you are required to write a post, providing a question, or a reflection, and thoughtfully replying to the posts of others, as well as to the final presentation of your colleagues.

Conferences: By the end of every module, there will be a conference, with presentation of an essay you will prepare to the occasion, with research investigation/bibliographical (with library research support, Prof. Harrison).

Essay revisions: You will have the opportunity to revise any suggestions or aspects of your essays for regrading, with the feedback given.

Final Project & Powerpoint presentation: By the end of the course, all students will present a final project (research and reflective) and a powerpoint for the group.

Attendance Policy

This is an online course, thus the expectation is that you be present online by timely participating in the learning activities of the course.

Academic Honesty

Plagiarism and cheating of any kind on an examination, quiz, or assignment will result at least in an "F" for that assignment (and may, depending on the severity of the case, lead to an "F" for the entire course) and may be subject to appropriate referral to the Office of Student Conduct for further action. See the UCF Golden Rule for further information. I will assume for this course that you will adhere to the academic creed of this University and will maintain the highest standards of academic integrity. In other words, don't cheat by giving answers to others or taking them from anyone else. I will also adhere to the highest standards of academic integrity, so please do not ask me to change (or expect me to change) your grade illegitimately or to bend or break rules for one person that will not apply to everyone.
